Darby Sabin Announces EP Pre-Release Party

A new IPA called "Lucky Bastard," which is made in honor of her father will debut at the party.

FARMINGTON, MAINE—Bluesy singer-songwriter Darby Sabin announces a Pre-Release Party for her debut EP, to be released in the coming months. The event will take place on November 20th at 5 pm at Farmhouse Beer Garden. It will give fans a preview of the songs that will be on her EP. She will also be launching "Lucky Bastard", a new IPA, in honor of her father, Paul Sabin, who passed away on June 11th earlier this year.

“He told many family members and friends ‘when I die, don’t sit around bawlin’ and cryin’ for me, shake your head and say Lucky Bastard’” said Sabin.

The beer was brewed in collaboration with Jeff Chaisson and his company, Ambition Brewing. Attendees will be able to taste the beer first and Sabin will distribute it to other local bars after the event. "I'm excited to work with someone so enthusiastic as Darby to create this beer in memory of her father," said Chaisson.

The Paul Harvey Sabin Foundation is a non-profit organization that will provide hunting and fishing licenses for children, as well as hunting and fishing supplies, training in those areas, and other fish and game oriented support. Additionally, PHSF will provide funding for musical lessons, instruments and other equipment for children in need. PHSF will also provide educational funding and training support for aspiring and practicing tradesmen and women, especially electricians. Finally, PHSF will provide legal and emotional support for single fathers.

All of these areas encapsulate Paul's livelihood and his presence within the communities he involved himself in. A portion of every beer sold will provide funding and resources for these missions of the Paul Harvey Sabin Foundation.
